Q. I called my insurance company and they told me that your doctor should have coded my colonoscopy as preventive and then the benefits will be better and I will not have any out-of-pocket expenses.

A. We did bill it correctly. You had a preventive exam, but during this exam if a polyp was found then it is very important that the doctor remove the polyp. Removing polyps prevents colon cancer. When a polyp is removed the billing code changes from preventive colonoscopy to colonoscopy with polypectomy. It will be illegal under these circumstances for us to change the code to a simple screening code. The insurance company can see from our billing that it was a preventive exam during which polyps were removed.

Your insurance may cover your exam in full whether it is a negative screening/preventive exam or something is found such as polyps if you have full screening benefits with your policy. It is recommended that you contact your insurance company and explain the above. Please discuss this with your insurance company and they should be able to help you. We are your advocate and will help you.
